Silikana and her fragrant flower garden

Written by Seu'ula Fonua
Illustrated by Victoria Ongolea

Once there was a butterfly named Silikana. Silikana was fond of the sweet smelling garden she had planted. The sweet smelling garden flourished as it was well taken care of.

Every morning, Silikana flies over to look at her sweet smelling garden. Look at the Siale Tonga, it is fragrant. Look at the Heilala, it smells pleasant. Look at the Pua, it smells nice. The garden flourished every morning and that made Silikana happy.

One morning, Silikana flew in to see her sweet smelling garden, only to find that something was missing. She looked at the Siale Tonga, it had withered. She looked at the Heilala, the flowers had fallen. She looked at the Pua, the pleasant smell had faded. Silikana was very sad.

Silikana looked around to see why her sweet smelling flowers had withered. She saw the soil was dry and knew the plants had withered from lack of rain. Silikana knew it must rain for her sweet smelling flowers to revive.

Silikana looked around to see if she could see any clouds. Even though there were only a few clouds in the sky, Silikana was still hopeful of getting some water from them. Silikana flew and dragged in clouds from the West; pulled in clouds from the East, pushed in clouds from the South, and carried in clouds from the North.

Silikana collected the clouds and rotated repeatedly. She rotated and rotated, and pulled down the clouds, and heavy rain fell on the land. The heavy rain watered the land and Silikana's sweet smelling garden.

The next morning, Silikana flew in to look at her sweet smelling garden. Look at the Siale Tonga, it is fragrant. Look at the Heilala, it smells pleasant. Look at the Pua, it smells nice. The sweet smelling garden had flourished again.

Silikana was surprised to see a new plant had grown. As Silikana looked, she saw that a Langakali had been added to her sweet smelling garden!

The end.
